CALL FOR PAPERS

The Swedish Design Research Journal (SDRJ) is published by SVID, the Swedish Industrial Design Foundation, which is an independent government sponsored organization. The mission of the Journal is to be a leading outlet for design research that targets and audience in both academia and practice internationally.

Summer issue 2017

We now call for papers for the summer issue 2017.

Examples of topics are:

- Design thinking
- Product design
- Service design
- Software design
- Design management

- Design and innovation
- Design for social change and social innovation
- Design and art
- Customer experience

We especially welcome articles concerning design in small and medium-sized companies.

Deadline: March 30, 2017 (Later submissions also welcomed, but accepted articles can not be guaranteed for next issue).

ABOUT THE JOURNAL

The journal is international, and aims to address design related issues globally, as well as to attract authors and readers from across the globe. SDRJ aims to advance the field of design research by promoting research that has true theoretical and practical relevance, and by demanding rigorous research evaluated by experienced reviewers.

One journal – two outlets

For researchers
The Swedish Design Research Journal is issued in two versions. The first version is aimed for researchers specifically. It is online and only containing research articles. Articles will be published online ahead of print.

For researchers, policy-makers and professionals
All research articles are also found in a magazine version of the journal. This second version is published in print and online and is aimed for a broader audience – researchers, policymakers and practitioners. It contains a mixture of research articles, popular-scientific articles and more. Contents include research, interviews, case studies, policy discussions, reviews of relevant books, and overview of conferences. The integrated structure will give additional information about the research articles and help to understand and implement knowledge.

The magazine version is found at: www.svid.se/en/Research/Design-Research-Journal/

Thanks to funding by SVID, Swedish Design Research Journal (SDRJ) is an open access journal.
